

Take our survey—help launch the online store!

Our first online survey asks a few simple questions that will play a crucial role in opening our phase 1 online store. It is open to current and prospective members and takes only a minute to complete.

This survey is another opportunity for our community to get involved in the CoG's development and we encourage all to participate. Please respond by March 1st.

Welcome to our new intern—Lindsay Meisel

We are excited to announce the hiring of Lindsay Meisel as our spring semester intern. Lindsay has dived right in and taken on several initiatives, including the creation of a comprehensive FAQ page for our website—drawing on 6 months of correspondence with our members and prospects. She will also help guide us through the site selection process and distributor relations.

Lindsay is a student at UC Berkeley in Rhetoric. Her stipend is paid jointly by the UC Chancellor's Advisory Committee on Sustainability and the City of Berkeley's Sustainability Office.

We have added a section for the timely posting of developments, including press coverage, events and committee news. For example, you'll find PDFs of all the articles written about the CoG in the local press. Just click on the "NEWS" tab to learn more.

Committee Updates

Community Outreach meeting this Wednesday, February 28th!

This committee is tasked with disseminating information about our cooperative to a diverse group of individuals and communities throughout the region. Increasing the CoG's diversity (economic, racial, cultural) and opening our membership to those who lack access to affordable healthy foods, is of particular interest.

Point person Matthew Green invites you to help get this committee off the ground with a meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 28 at 7:30 pm, 1558 Milvia Street (between Cedar and Vine) in Berkeley.

Sustainability/Products creating products survey

Having completed a working version of our sustainability guidelines, this committee is now writing a product survey that will help us define the kinds of products the CoG will offer when our online store opens, so your response will be vital.
